Internship Series: Metrolink Internship Inspires My Future In Transportation

By Danielle Dirksen, USC BS Urban Studies and Planning, Fall 2020

METRANS Student News is launching a series entitled Internship Series, sharing student-produced articles about their various internship experiences and journeys.

People do not typically associate the beautiful Downtown Los Angeles with its public transit system, and nor would most choose to describe the city as "beautiful." As an urban advocate, I frequently refer to Los Angeles as the most beautiful city in the world. I also adore our public transit system.

Calling All METRANS Readers: Submit Your Ideas

We want to make our METRANS newsletter exciting and informative each week for you, the reader. Our team has several ideas to provide fresh perspectives for the newsletter, including Transportation Professional Spotlights and a section for researchers. We actively welcome your ideas, too, and would love for you to email our Publisher, Danielle Dirksen, here with your suggestions.

Is There A Case For Free Rides For Women?

Women may soon get to travel for free on buses and Metro ains in Delhi. Proponents claim that the policy will protect and liberate women. Critics argue that it is financially unviable and unfair.

Eno Webinar
Transportation in the Age of Biometrics
Thursday, July 11, 2019 1 pm - 1:30 pm Pacific

In October, the TSA released their Biometrics Roadmap for Aviation Security and the Passenger Experience, laying out how the agency plans to use biometric technology to modernize and update the identity verification process. As biometrics become more commonly used throughout various sectors of the economy, the transportation sector has, in many ways, lagged behind other industries in adopting and leveraging these new technologies.

In this webinar, Howard Kass, Executive Vice President of Corporate Affairs at biometrics-based identity management firm CLEAR, discusses how CLEAR is already using biometrics to update the decades-old airport identity verification process.

UCLA Institute of Transportation Studies:
Transportation Camp Los Angeles 2019
Saturday, July 13, 2019 9 am - 5 pm Pacific
UCLA Luskin School of Public Affairs
337 Charles E Young Drive East, Los Angeles, CA 90095

TransportationCamp LA is an open venue for sharing and learning about the region's transportation issues and successes, open to advocates, professionals, community members, and everyone passionate about mobility in Los Angeles and Southern California. TransportationCamp LA aims to be an open, forward-thinking event that brings together people of all facets of the transportation world.

TransportationCamp is not a formal conference - rather, as an unconference, it is driven entirely by attendees' interests and experiences. At TransportationCamp, there is no set agenda prior to the event. Sessions are determined at the beginning of the day and are drawn from proposals and ideas that attendees submit. A session can be any format: a presentation, an open discussion, a demonstration, a panel, or even a group exercise or game.

TransportationCamp covers urban transportation issues in all their forms, including economic, social, public health, and environmental impacts. Session topics in the previous TransportationCamp LA ranged from "Measuring Great Streets," to "Beyond Cars: Suburban Mobility," to "Equity & Inclusion in the Innovation Economy" and change every year to reflect the latest research and questions of the moment. Have thoughts on the proliferation of scooters and shared mobility devices across LA, or the Metro's Twenty-Eight by '28 transportation projects? Get your own session started just with an oversized Post-It note.

“Part 1: Microtransit 2.0” – From Pilot to Transit System Integration
Saturday, July 24, 2019 11 am - 11:30 am Pacific

Scaling up microtransit operations from a pilot project to a program introduces new opportunities and challenges for transit system integration. Gwinnett County, in the Atlanta Metro, has designed a multi-phase microtransit expansion from 2019 through 2024 that reaches new areas geographically, increases integration with ADA complementary paratransit service, and facilitates more connectivity with fixed route service.

This webinar, with the consultant supporting Gwinnett County’s approach, will discuss post-pilot activity for microtransit, specifically the integration of microtransit into the family of services a transit agency provides.
