It is my privilege to welcome you to this week's issue of METRANS On the Move, a student-run weekly transportation newsletter. I am the Career Opportunities Editor and International Public Policy and Management student at USC. The newsletter is a great source of latest developments in transportation, research, and job opportunities. This week we feature a UC Davis Seminar on Rethink Everything, Houston-to-Dallas Bullet Train Company and many exciting scholarships and job opportunities. Feel free to reach out to me, any of the student workers, or METRANS Associate Director Victoria Deguzman at victoriv@price.usc.edu with your ideas for the newsletter. UC Berkeley’s Dr. Susan Shaheen Seminar on “Rethink Everything?”
By Stephen Kulieke, Senior Director of Communications, ITS-UC Davis

Urban mobility is undergoing unprecedented transformations and is being challenged by ride-hailing companies like Uber and Lyft and fast-emerging shared services like electric scooters and dockless bikes. For many the trends disrupting public transit are unsettling. In this time of public transit innovation what is working, what is not working, and what should be changing? On Friday, April 20, 2018, Dr. Susan Shaheen of UC Berkeley, an internationally recognized leader in innovative mobility research, examined these questions at the ITS-UC Davis organized seminar sponsored through ITS-Davis’ partnership with the Pacific Southwest Region University Transportation Center. America's Cities Are Still Too Afraid to Make Driving Unappealing

At a macro level, the decision-process for mode of commute implies that there are two ways to shift more commuters out of single-occupancy vehicles and into other modes of transportation, whether that’s biking, carpooling, walking, or transit. We can incentivize transit by making all of those other options more attractive. Or we can disincentivize driving by making it less so. What's become increasingly apparent in the United States is that we'll only get so far playing to the first strategy without incorporating the second. Read more here.

10th National Aviation System Planning Symposium
21st Century Challenges in Aviation System Planning
May 20 - 22, 2018
The Lakefront Anchorage, 4800 Spenard Road, Anchorage, Alaska 99517
Call for Posters

The National Aviation System Planning Symposium (NASPS) is a triennial event organized with the goal of assessing the state of the art in system planning, addressing current issues confronting the airport and aviation industry, and identifying research needs to inform the future research agenda for aviation system planning. The symposium brings together system planning consultants, airport and aviation system planners and managers, air carrier and other aviation industry representatives, Federal and state transportation officials, and others interested in the future development of the aviation system and its role in the larger multi-modal transportation system for two days of meetings, presentations, and networking. The NASPS provides a unique opportunity to gather people who are actively involved in planning the aviation system to focus on its future development and improvement for a sustainable, healthy future. The symposium is cosponsored by the Transportation Research Board committees on Aviation System Planning and Intergovernmental Relations in Aviation.

Participation grants are available to provide financial assistance to enable suitably qualified graduate students to attend the 10th National Aviation System Planning Symposium. Learn more about eligibility and other requirements of a Graduate Student Participation Grant online.
