“Mentorship for Success”

By Rebecca Weintraub

Rebecca Weintraub, USC Annenberg clinical professor and director of the Communication Management Master’s program, is a recent recipient of the prestigious USC Provost’s Mentoring Award, a selective honor awarded to no more than two professors selected from across the university annually. In this presentation, Weintraub will share her thoughts on the value of mentoring, and how we can take advantage of the many valuable opportunities to mentor and be mentored in our both our personal and professional lives

“Mentoring is one of those things that’s in the eye of the beholder. I might think I’ve just had a career counseling session or a Q-and-A, and they walk out going, I think I was just mentored. So the joy of this job is that I have gotten to interact with, teach and support just hundreds of people.”

Rebecca Weintraub has spent more than 20 years in the field of communication, facilitation, change management and organizational behavior. She teaches strategic communication classes in the Communication Management program and provides communication and facilitation consulting services to organizations in the public, private and non-profit sectors.
